

The Five of Spades Person

The Card of the Wanderer

The Five of Spades is the card of changes and travel. These people like to travel and have a certain amount of restlessness. Most of them dislike routine. Many of them are avid travelers or move to a new home on a frequent basis. However, their restlessness often applies to their spiritual quest, their striving for truth, and development of their inner self. With the Jack of Hearts in Mercury there is a certain amount of sacrifice made for loved ones in their lives, or for an education. This is especially true in their early life. Their Karma Card, the Ten of Hearts, gives them much social success. However, the Nine of Clubs (Venus Card) speaks of numerous disappointments on a personal level, especially with friends and loved ones. Therefore, they usually have more success with groups than on a one to one basis. They have strong spiritual inclinations and must learn to express unconditional love in their closest relationships in order to access the high side of the spiritual cards found in the personal positions of their life path.

They may have trouble at work with co-workers and other elements that require much effort to overcome. They find the most success working with partners and in occupations that allow them travel and meeting new people. One of their challenges is to find success in their business transactions. They don't always make the best deals for themselves. Money often comes in association with romance or marriage.

Some of the Five of Spades Issues Concerning Relationships

These people are popular and well-liked. They enjoy love, romance and travel. There are sure to be some disappointments in love from time to time as they are here to 'complete' some relationships began in past lives and let them go. With the right attitude, these endings can be translated as graduations, crowning achievements in completing certain chapters of soul development as it pertains to their personal relationships. In any event, there are sure to be some major completions with certain people in their life, to whom they will never return. It is always best to let them go and move on.
