

The Queen of Spades Person

The Card of Self-Mastery

These people of such power and authority are surprisingly not always found in positions of authority or prominence. They can end up in menial positions where they bitterly complain about their position in life and never amount to much. However, this is the card of Self-Mastery that sits in the very crowning position in the Spiritual Spread. If these people recognize their powerful gifts and take responsibility in their life, they can rise to any heights they desire.

Among them we find some who are the most caustic and hard-driven and others who are the true mothers of the world who compassionately share and teach their wisdom. They are all born to rule, but they must actualize that destiny themselves. Their values play a key role in determining just how their lives turn out. If directed solely towards material gain, which is often the case, they lose most of their power and potential. They rise to their highest potential by following their intuition and inner guidance.

All Queen of Spades have the King of Clubs as their planetary ruling card. This makes them highly intelligent, able leaders and brings much success in education or writing. This also gives them a strong independent streak and a high degree of intuition.

They should avoid mixing love and money and there is always trouble when legal matters arise. They would do best to avoid arguments with men in powerful positions. They love to spend money and they hate getting the short end in legal affairs, but they usually do. They do best when they realize their place in the royal family and access the inner wisdom that is their birthright. They are exalted in the eyes of God. They have all the equipment necessary to do what they choose.

Some of the Queen of Spades Issues Concerning Relationships

The Queen of Spades has high ideals about love and marriage, so high that they could border on fantasy in some cases. They can be prone to affairs and these are likely to be more of a loss than a gain. There always seems to be large losses of money associated with love for them. They want to appear prosperous and have someone of means for a partner, but this usually doesn't happen. Later in life they find more success and fulfillment in love if they don't give up the dream of happiness before then. In some cases there is a strong independent nature that can make binding commitments, such as marriage, something to be avoided.
